

Is Jesus Christ Both Fully God and Fully Man?

Sixbert SANGWA • June 04, 2024

Christianity is built upon a number of core beliefs, one of the most significant being the divine nature of Jesus Christ. It is a doctrine that is both profound and mysterious, proclaiming that Jesus is both fully God and fully man. This is not a story of numerous gods, but of a single, omnipotent God who chose to take on human form. This concept is a crucial cornerstone that underpins the entire Christian faith. This discussion seeks to elucidate this complex mystery, providing a clearer understanding for those new to the faith or anyone seeking a more profound comprehension of this essential Christian belief.

Jesus Christ: The Divine Made Flesh

The Bible is clear and unequivocal in its declaration that Jesus Christ is God Himself. This affirmation of Jesus' divine nature is found as early as the beginning of the Gospel of John. Here, Jesus is referred to as the Word. John 1:1 reads, “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.” This verse is a powerful proclamation of Jesus' divinity, asserting His divine nature in the most emphatic terms.

To further illustrate this point, we can look to the writings of Apostle Paul in the New Testament. In Colossians 2:9, it reads, “For in Christ all the fullness of the Deity lives in bodily form.” This verse is not merely powerful, it is definitive. It assures us that Jesus is not just similar to God, or a reflection of God. It states, without room for doubt, that Jesus is God Himself, living in human form.

The Human Experience of Jesus Christ: God in Man's Form

In a remarkable balance, the Bible also emphasizes that Jesus is fully man. This is not a contradiction to His divinity, but rather, it adds to the profound mystery that defines the Christian faith. Jesus was born of a woman, grew as a child, and experienced all the conditions inherent to human life such as hunger, thirst, and exhaustion. He even suffered and died, experiencing a fate that is the ultimate reality for all mortals. The Gospel of Luke provides evidence of Jesus's humanity, recounting how Jesus grew in wisdom and stature (Luke 2:52). This indicates His human development, His experience of growing up, learning, and maturing, just as any other human would.

The Apostle John further underscores the humanity of Jesus, writing in John 1:14, “The Word became flesh and made his dwelling among us.” The phrase “the Word became flesh” highlights the tangible reality of Jesus' humanity. He lived on this earth, experiencing human life with all its trials, tribulations, joys, and sorrows. Ultimately, He gave His life as a sacrifice for the salvation of mankind.

The Profound Mystery and Central Importance in Christianity

The dual nature of Jesus — being both fully God and fully man — is indeed a profound mystery. Yet, it is a mystery that is essential to the Christian faith. As God, Jesus has the divine authority and power to forgive sins and to promise eternal life. As man, Jesus is able to empathize with our weaknesses, our struggles, and our temptations, having experienced them Himself (Hebrews 4:15).

Understanding Jesus as fully God and fully man enables us to comprehend the depth of God's love for humanity. It reveals to us that God loved humanity so much that He chose to become one of us, to live among us, to experience human life, and ultimately, to sacrifice Himself for our redemption.

A Comforting Assurance for New Converts

For those newly converted to the Christian faith, this understanding should be a source of immense comfort. To know that Jesus, being fully God, possesses the divine power to save you, is truly assuring. To know that Jesus, being fully man, understands your struggles and is always ready to help you, is enormously comforting. As you embark on this journey of faith, delve into the teachings of the Bible, seek to know Him more, and nurture your newfound faith. Always remember, Jesus Christ, fully God and fully man, is at the heart of it all. He is the one who bridges the gap between the divine and the human, providing salvation and eternal life to all who believe in Him.
